Zika Virus Information

As the summer months are upon us, the mosquito population is growing. The Zika Virus has been in the news and there is concern about how the virus may or may not affect our families. This article summarizes information from the Center for Disease Control (CDC) and the New Mexico Department of Health websites. As always, the providers at Las Clinicas del Norte are available to answer your questions about Zika and other concerns.

The Zika virus was first discovered in 1947 and was named after a forest in Uganda. Before 2007, at least 14 cases of Zika had been documented. In May 2015 the Pan American Health Organization issued an alert regarding the first confirmed Zika virus case in Brazil. On February 1, 2016 the World Health Organization (WHO) declared Zika virus a Public Health Emergency of International Concern. Specific areas where Zika is spreading is often difficult to determine and will likely change over time. If you or a family member are traveling, the CDC Travelers' Health site contains up to date information. To date, three cases of Zika have been confirmed in New Mexico. All three of the cases involved individuals who had traveled to areas with confirmed Zika outbreaks.

The most common symptoms of Zika are: Fever, rash, joint pain and conjunctivitis (red eyes). The illness is usually mild with symptoms lasting for several days to a week after being bitten by an infected mosquito. People usually don't get sick enough to go to their provider. The good news is people rarely die of Zika, however since the symptoms are mild, often people do not know they have been infected.

There is no vaccine to prevent the Zika virus.

The Zika virus is mainly spread to people through the bite of an infected mosquito. However, it is also possible that the virus may be transmitted from a mother to her fetus during pregnancy or to her baby at the time of delivery. At this time there are no documented cases of the virus being transmitted through breastfeeding.

There is also a risk of transmission through sexual contact. An infected man's semen carries the virus. At this time how long the virus will live in the semen is unknown. The CDC recommends men use a condom to decrease the spread of the virus.

Interestingly, an infected individual may also pass the virus on to another mosquito through a bite. The CDC recommends travelers even if they do not feel sick who return to the United States from an area with Zika take precautions to prevent mosquito bites for 3 weeks. Be sure to let your provider know if you have recently traveled to areas identified as having the Zika virus. Pregnant women should talk to their provider if they or their male sex partners recently traveled to an area with Zika, even if they don't feel sick.

Since May 2015, Brazil has experienced a significant outbreak of Zika virus. In recent months, Brazilian officials reported an increase in the number of babies born with microcephaly, (unusually small head). Since these initial reports of a link between Zika and microcephaly, researchers across the world began working to study the link between Zika during pregnancy and microcephaly.

In a recent article, CDC scientists announced that there is now enough evidence to conclude that Zika virus infection during pregnancy is a cause of microcephaly and other severe fetal brain defects and has been linked to problems in infants, including eye defects, hearing loss, and impaired growth. Scientists are studying the full range of other potential health problems that Zika virus infection during pregnancy may cause.

Although Zika virus is a cause of microcephaly and other severe fetal brain defects and has been linked with these other problems in infants, there is more to learn. Researchers are collecting data to better understand the extent Zika virus' impact on mothers and their children.

Based on the available evidence, we think that Zika virus infection in a woman who is not pregnant would not pose a risk for birth defects in future pregnancies after the virus has cleared from her blood. Cont'd.....

Cont'd— Zika Virus

From what we know about similar infections, once a person has been infected with Zika virus, he or she is likely to be protected from a future Zika infection.

To date, there have been no confirmed blood transfusion-transmission cases in the United States. However, there is a strong possibility the Zika virus can be spread through blood transfusions. Because most people infected with the Zika virus don't show any symptoms, blood donors may not know they have been infected. Zika virus currently poses a low risk to the blood supply in the continental US, but this could change depending on how many people become infected with the virus.

There are two certain types of mosquitoes that transmit the Zika virus, the Aedes aegypi (the yellow fever mosquito) and the Aedes albopitcus (the Asian tiger mosquito). These mosquitoes may be distinguished by their bold black and white markings. Additionally, these mosquitoes like to live near people, either indoors or outdoors, and will typically will bite during the daytime.

The CDC recommends the following steps to prevent mosquito bites:

Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants

Stay in places with air conditioning and window and door screens to keep mosquitoes outside

Take steps to control mosquitoes inside and outside your home

Sleep under a mosquito bed net if you are overseas or outside and are not able to protect yourself from mosquito bites

Use Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) registered insect repellents with one of the following active ingredients: DEET, picaridin, IR3535, oil of lemon eucalyptus, or para-menthane-diol.

Do not apply insect repellent on your child's hands, eyes, mouth, cut or irritated skin

Adults should spray the repellent into their hands and then apply to your child's face

Do not use insect repellent on babies younger than 2 months old

Do not use products containing oil of lemon eucalyptus or para-menthane-diol on children younger than 3 years old

Dress your child in clothing that covers his/her arms and legs

Cover the crib, stroller and baby carrier with mosquito netting

Treat clothing and gear with permethrin or purchase permethrin-treated items

Summer Reading Classes Underway

The "Library Ladybugs" and the "Bookworms" are busy at the El Rito Library tending their experimental straw bale and traditional gardens until August 4. Classes for 3-5 year old pre-readers run 9:30 am on Tuesdays and Thursdays and are led by Barbara Berger, long-time El Rito resident and educator. Children 6-11 years are guided on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 9:30 till 11:30 am by Lauren Krumwiede who also works with the Red Mountain Farm in Abiquiu and is a recent graduate in Environmental Geoscience from DePauw University. Please join our Reading Camp for outdoor activities, local field trips, indoor reading, snacks, and free books each week to take home and keep. We could use another adult volunteer to help our facilitators.

Family Passes Good Through August 31, 2016.

Come to the library and ask for a Family Pass to a number of NM museums and historic sites - all FREE for a group of up to six people. It's a great thing to do with those friends and relatives that pop in for a visit this summer, made possible by the NM State Library and the NM Department of Cultural Affairs. Passes can be checked out with a valid library card - for one week.

Book Club Members Sought

The library is reaching out this summer to anyone who might be interested in joining a book club for adults. We'll try to help with organization - you just need to call 575-581-4608 or email us at director@elritolibrary.org to learn more. It's a wonderful way to have time with others who enjoy a good book and a bit of social time.

Bookkeeper Hired

We're delighted to welcome our new bookkeeper, Yaseen Qadr, who is going to keep us well organized. Yaseen is a graduate of UNM's Anderson School of Business and has recently returned to New Mexico, having attended Abiquiu Elementary School at the start of his education.

Library Volunteers Needed

Have you ever thought about doing something useful for your community, but just weren't sure what? The library has a quite a few needs that could be addressed by volunteers - some require long term commitment, some are more one-time jobs. Call Lynett Gillette today at 575-581-4608 or email director@elritolibrary.org and we'll send you a list of possible volunteer opportunities.

New Catalogue System

The library is switching over to a newer system for our catalogue records. It should be up and running in early July. One of the big advantages for our patrons will be that you can check for a particular book by accessing the catalogue from our website (elritolibrary.org).

Christina Masoliver's Marionettes Returns Later in Summer

Back by popular request, the marionette theater Los Titiriteros and its puppeteer and artistic director Christina Masoliver will bring a new show to our library at a date still to be determined. Watch for signs and an email notice soon.
